its just a day babe you will always have some sort of "father figure" in your life. it might not be the best relationship, it might not be the biological father, it might not even be a male in your life. people love you!! there is somebody who cares for others as a parent. we all havits just a day babe you will always have some sort of "father figure" in your life. it might not be the best relationship, it might not be the biological father, it might not even be a male in your life. people love you!! there is somebody who cares for others as a parent. we all have our non biological parentals recognize them on these days because positivity helps the lonely soul more than negativity helps the lonely soul more than negativity

Holy smokes Robin you.

"ryan"gfggggggSo, at the weekend, as usual, I went out looking for drunken fornicating sinners to rebuke. Anyway, at about 2:30-3 a.m., this drunken dyke who was wearing what was clearly a man's shirt, in open defiance of Deuteronomy 22:5, "told me there was a party going on at hers, and I thought it sounded like a good opportunity to spread the word to some degenerates. Sure enough, it was a complete nest of vice, as proven by the fact that one room contained a bunch of people doing coke off a mirror, although no one offered me any. I sat down on a sofa and soon enough a skinny black-clad queer with a trendy haircut and hipster glasses gave me a glass of absinthe and started trying to persuade me to fornicate with him. Obviously, as anyone would do, I told him that I absolutely couldn't because the Bible forbids me to do gay stuff, to which he responded that Christianity was just a bunch of made-up fairytales that didn't make sense. I challenged this atheist pervert to give me an example of how the Bible didn't make any sense, and he asked me how God and Jesus could be the same person, despite being different people. Naturally, I whipped out my Bible and pointed to 1 John 5:7 (For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one.) At this point, he accepted that I was right and Christianity was correct, and therefore we agreed that it would be morally wrong for him to sodomise me. Another soul saved for Christ.

But just think how different this story would have been if I'd been carrying a different Bible!

Imagine if I'd pulled out a New International Version!gggghgghhd
